Senior Gershaw Writes

The outstanding event recently was the resignation of Hon. J. L. Hays. He has rendered a great service to Canada and those who worked with him and know him best will miss him most. He served Canada well, made a great contribution and is quite justified now in escaping from the turmoil of public office. He is a great Liberal and his name will go down in history with other distinguished statesmen who came from those little provinces down by the sea. There was a by-election in Yale, B. C. and the C.P.F. candidate was an easy winner. Mr. Sterling, who had been a member there for many years, was asked why he resigned and made an election necessary. He replied that if he had continued a member it would have cost him his life, and when an election would have been necessary just the same.

It would seem from a political point of view there are two camps in Canada. One group, represented by the C.P.F., believe in socialism, and the other group, including Liberals, Conservatives and Social Crediters believe in individual enterprise. When August comes the Liberals will have a new leader. Whoever is named will be Prime Minister of Canada, at least for a while and his name will go down in history as having reached a high place in Canadian public life. There are many contenders and the thoughtful electors will choose someone who will most aptly represent Canada in his relations with other parts of the Empire and the peace loving nations of the world.

The member from Fraser Valley went home to be of assistance to his constituents in the flood stricken area. He had looked forward to playing a heroic role in rescuing people. It just happens, however, that his farm is on high land and all the milk cows from the surrounding country have been gathered there so George has been doing his bit to relieve distress by milking those cows from morning till night.

FAMILY BUDGET

Not so very long ago you were looked upon as somewhat queer if you ran your personal or family money affairs on a budget. Nowadays, people know how pleasant it is to come out even at the weekend or year end. Die hard profane to look down their noses at budgeters are really envious not only of the peace of mind budgeters bring, but of the added pleasures obtainable in life through making wise choices true by planning in advance the purchase of longed for articles.

A family budget is a plan for making your income do the most possible to make you and your family happy. It is not a list of "Thou shalt nots" but a guide for better living, a device to get you things you want. It doesn't mean you have to stay home from the movies because the price of the ticket would upset your petty cash. In fact, good budgeting says it is alright to be wildly extravagant as occasion—so long as you know you are doing it and are getting value for your money, and for the discomfort your budget tells you will follow.

The period at which salary, wages or other money are received has an effect on budgeting. If you are paid weekly, obviously it is easier to control purchases than if you are paid on a semi-monthly or monthly basis. In the latter case, you are likely to spend liberally early in the month and then have to economize toward the end. If you budget, you are less likely to end yourself replenishing your ability to get those things so desperately about the 20th of month. Money is only fulfilling its purpose when it supplies something we need or want. Some is earmarked at once for the necessities, some goes into the bank to be saved for a future want, some into insurance as a form of investment. It is not the amount that counts so greatly, but ingenuity in making it do what we want. It is impossible to advise anyone in detail the budgeting path to take. What gives the greatest satisfaction to one person or family would not appeal at all to another.

Life is made up largely of choices between this and that. A child will stand in front of the candy show case with his nickel or dime clutched in a perspiring hand; he has to make up his mind what type of candy will give him the greatest amount of satisfaction in exchange for his money; and whether he should spend the money now or wait until next week or next month when he will have a little more money to put beside it on the counter and get in exchange a bigger and better candy. The child's candy problem is just an example in small of the problem facing the adult person. In addition to the practicalities of the situation there are other satisfactions to be considered in making (Continued on last page)

More Living Space

MANY OF THE INTERNATIONAL controversies of the past have been associated with the never-ending quest for more living space for the people in the congested countries of Europe and Asia. As long as congestion exists, there is likely to be unrest, since it is over-crowded areas that hunger, disease and political unrest flourish. The problem of finding new lands which are suitable for settling the excess population from the older countries is one which has been receiving attention for many years. There are still large areas in many parts of the world which are very sparsely populated because of poor climatic conditions, poor accessibility, lack of fertile soil or other adverse features, and it is unlikely that it would ever be considered desirable to move large sections of population to them.

Plan To Open Vast New Area

Recently the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, known as UNESCO, called a conference of representatives of seven American and three European nations, as well as observers from a number of organizations, to a conference in Peru, to discuss a plan to turn the vast natural resources of the Amazon River basin to the use of mankind. The area under consideration is made up of some 270,000 square miles of land which is at present almost totally uninhabited, and which is readily accessible to the Atlantic Ocean by way of the mighty Amazon River, in which sea-going ships may navigate for 2,500 miles, the entire length of the great river.

Called A Long Range Project

Delegates to the meeting came from six countries bordering on the Amazon: Bolivia, Brazil, Ecuador, Colombia, Peru and Venezuela. The United States was also represented, as was France, Great Britain and the Netherlands, as owners of the Guianas, which border on the Amazon. These observers from such bodies as the Food and Agriculture Organization, the International Labor Organization and the World Health Organization. While it will be a long-range project, and considerable time will be required to assemble the necessary information concerning the territory, it is envisioned as "a great new area of world development in this jungle land now inhabited by only a few Indians." In undertaking the project, the United Nations is helping to find a solution to one of the most serious problems of these times.

His Jobs Helping Farmers Solve Their Soil Problems

Dominion Experimental Farm at Swift Current, Sask.

By T. R. MELVILLE-NEES
Central Press Canadian
SASKATON, Sask.—L. B. Thomson, the man who played a major part in the launching of the Prairie Farm Projects Administration, is now director of the big organization. People close to the prairie farm scene greeted the appointment with unqualified approval.

Mr. Thomson called the first meeting of P.F.A. in 1935, following the passing of a Dominion act setting up the body which was charged with the responsibility of saving a lot of prairie farm land threatened with ruin. Since that time, he has been a member of the advisory committee, and just as close to the work of P.F.A. as his busy life as superintendent of the Experimental Farm at Swift Current allowed him to be. There have been many occasions when those close to "L.B.", when he has cut deeply into what would normally be sleeping time to make time for P.F.A. business.

More Scope
L. B. Thomson's main concern has always been soil conservation, and under his direction at Swift Current a lot of valuable work has been done along this line. Now, as director of P.F.A., he will have much wider scope, and it is not any secret that this energetic man with the big pipe and ready grin plans to make things hum as boss of Canada's biggest conservation and irrigation set-up.

Thomson was the man who, in the blackest years of the big drought that laid waste to millions of acres of crop, set out with his farm staff to do the work which had to be done along every green thing in the fields, buried fences and phone lines deep in the winter snows that had to be fought against drought and soil erosion in the dry thirties, members of "L.B.'s" staff say he did a "terrific job."

Thus, Thomson himself has little to say except that his present day was when the farmers, the men he tried to help, stopped referring to the experimental farm staff as "white collar farmers." "If there's one thing I'm proud of," he says, "it's the way we won the confidence of the farmers and showed that we could work with them and find the answers to their problems."

Proof of this is seen in the high regard in which L. B. Thomson is held by farmers and agronomists all over the west. Having spent 22 of his 48 years in the study of soil conservation problems, he is regarded as an authority on the subject, and his widely diversified experience with soil and water conservation will stand him in good stead as director of P.F.A.

L. B. Thomson is a native of New Zealand, and left his birthplace, Blenheim, in 1920 to come to Canada. His first job was with Luther B. Sharp, at Badway, Alta., where he sheared sheep. He admits he was not an accomplished shearer, but managed 90 to 100 a day. After further which collects runoff water, was one of his favorite projects, and a fine demonstration of his firm belief in the value of collecting surface water and putting it to good use in a dry country. The trees are one of the reasons for the huge crowds which travel hundreds of miles to field days at the station each summer across the treeless sweep of southern Alberta.

The year 1935 saw Mr. Thomson's appointment as superintendent of the Dominion experimental station at Swift Current, Sask. In addition to intensive work on soils problems, he also found time to lend a hand to numerous organizations and campaigns, including wartime drives of all kinds. He has served as chairman of the board of directors of the Horse Marketing Co-op since it was organized three years ago, and has made an important contribution to the success of this project which set out to rid the west of surplus horses, and at the same time feed a lot of hungry people in Europe.

Mr. Thomson's appointment as director of P.F.A. was announced shortly after his return from a trip to New Zealand. His successor, George Spence, who last year was designated a member of the international agricultural commission.

Mr. Thomson's wide knowledge of western Canadian soils, and his firm belief in water conservation as a means of improving the country fit in well with the aims of P.F.A. Men who have spent a lifetime on problems of dry land farming say that "L.B." will approach his new job with a degree of wisdom and understanding hard to bring good results. A close association with P.F.A. right from its inception will enable the new chief to tackle a job with which he will be completely familiar. Much of the early work of P.F.A. was carried out on the basis of the advice of such men as

Living Monument
Then in 1925 the Dominion government established the experimental range station at Manierberies, Alta., and L. B. Thomson was made superintendent.

He remained at Manierberies until 1928. Something of a monument to Thomson's regime at the big lonely ranch is a fine growth of trees which surround the buildings. The tree belts are irrigated from a reservoir back of the buildings. The reservoir,

INCREASE SEEN IN WATERFOWL

REGINA.—A "moderate increase" in the number of nesting waterfowl in Canada this spring as compared with 1947 has been found in most areas, it was revealed at a meeting of organizations interested in waterfowl bird conditions held in the legislative building.

Reports stressed, however, that unreported conditions in the far north, and changes which may occur later in the season, might cancel or seriously influence these apparent gains. Water levels are abnormally high in all provinces and in many areas flood conditions are unfavorable for waterfowl production.

To date aerial waterfowl surveys on which reports were heard at the meeting have covered over 10,000 miles in the three prairie provinces. Ground surveys have covered nearly 5,000 miles. Many of the larger marshes are being surveyed from canoes and boats. Air surveys are conducted at altitudes averaging 100 feet above the ground, which permits accurate counts of bodies of water seen and their duck population on a strip a quarter of a mile wide.

In Manitoba, aerial surveys completed by May 20 covered 6,500 miles; in Saskatchewan, 7,015 miles; in Alberta, 5,500 miles. Ground coverage in Manitoba to date has covered nearly 1,000 miles; in Saskatchewan 2,428 miles; in Alberta, 1,000 miles of permanent survey transects.

L. B. Thomson, and he has been since its inception in 1935.

Mr. Thomson claims, with a good deal of assurance, that working toward a common goal with the farmer in the dry thirties created a new understanding between the scientist and the man on the land. Such an understanding, say western agronomists, may well contribute in a big way toward success in "L.B.'s" new role.

Mr. Thomson's appointment as director of P.F.A. was announced shortly after his return from a trip to New Zealand. His successor, George Spence, who last year was designated a member of the international agricultural commission.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

Taking Care Of Grandpa

BY NABEL E. HANNA

NONE of us on Chestnut Street was particularly surprised at what Grandpa Harrison up and did last summer. He was seventy-six, all right, but anyone who knew him certainly couldn't think of him as at all feeble, or childish either. His house was the big one on the corner, the one with all the roses and the screened porch. He has always kept the lawn mowed and the paint fresh, and you should see his garden—it's the best place around. Inside the house was always clean enough, and comfortable. Martha Harrison, his wife, had decided his dad was too old to live alone any more, but we could all see through that. Who would live in that little tucked-up place next to the trucks when they could move into a beautiful place like Grandpa's and rent their own for a fat figure? So of course, Martha wanted Grandpa Harrison took to sitting with her in her parlor real often, though. The young people were always having a crowd in for some bridge game or other, or else the baby was crying. Sometimes when they went out he would say with the baby, "He didn't mind as he told Martha. He couldn't really ask his own son to move, or tell him he wasn't wanted. And Grandpa just doted on the baby, of course, though as you might expect, Ellen, that's John's wife, wouldn't let him touch her unless she wanted to go out.

Then Ethan moved in too. Him and his painted-up wife, and those smart-aleck kids. They're not out of high school by now. Grandpa Harrison spent more and more evenings at Martha's. Used to duck out right after supper before those two smart daughters-in-law of his got him at their dishes, or the kids started up their everlasting Victrola and Rialto blattling. He told Martha that Ethan would have liked to stay in his own home, but Virginia said they belonged there looking after Grandpa too. We all knew just how much rent they were getting out of their house. When Abe Lucas, he's the real estate man, told Grandpa Harrison about the deal coming up he was supposed of course the boys would have discussed it with their dad if they planned to camp on him permanently. Well, it seems that both the boys had deals all set to sell their houses. And both stood to double the money they had in them. When Abe told Grandpa he just looked sick. All the noise and quarrelling of those kids and the two women, who didn't get on at all, was beginning to tell on him. Martha said it just made her boil to see him looking so tired and unhappy. All Grandpa said when Abe told him was to not let them put deals through for a few days, just to stall them off awhile. And Abe said he would, but he thought Grandpa would be glad to see the boys where they got off for once. Well, that night at supper Grandpa told them that he was looking mighty queer.

He didn't say at Martha's long, but went straight back and the four of them were waiting for him. Well, he just told it to them right out. Martha says she certainly would have liked to be a little mouse in a corner when he told them. "Boys," he said, "you've been here nearly two years, and I've been here to have your company. But now, if I were you I wouldn't make any sudden moves about selling my property. There's a mighty bad housing shortage on, and you might not find a place when you leave here. I don't want to rush you off, but come August I won't really need any more. Martha Winslow and I are getting married, and Martha won't be around any more. And he kind of winked at them. "We'll be kinda homecoming, you know," he said.

Well, Abe said it didn't take them long to cancel their house deals when they saw Grandpa meant business.

Martha and Grandpa have been married nearly a year now, and the house is just about the same as always. But you should see those two. Land sakes, they're likely to be out holding hands on the porch in broad daylight.

MANITOBA MAN UNEARTHS BUFFALO SKELETON IN UPRIGHT POSITION

GLADSTONE, Man.—The skeleton of a buffalo, which apparently became mired in the marsh on the edge of this town, many years ago, was unearthed by M. Puhack.

Mr. Puhack, who lives on No. 4 highway, was digging a basement for an addition to his home and was down about two feet when he came across the skull. The horns came off and after carefully digging to remove the skull, he could plainly see the bones of the animal's back.

Further digging revealed that the skeleton was upright with all four feet in a standing position.

L. S. Norris-Ely, curator, the Manitoba Museum, advanced the theory that the buffalo might have become mired in marsh mud, or a river bed, possibly 70 or 80 years ago. He claimed he had never come across the entire remains of a buffalo in a standing position, but just bone and skull fragments.

Explaining "they are very stupid animals always going through; rather than around obstacles," he emphasized this with a reticence of an eyewitness report he had heard from the late Chas. Alloway who claimed to have seen them, in spring, trample one another underfoot in stubborn attempts to ford an ice-ridden, flooding Assiniboine river.

There is a rash, intense itching that will do more to ruin you than any of your skin troubles. It is a powerful penetrating that the itching is actually stopped, and in a short time you are rid of this unpleasant, fiery burning, the same it is that it is a skin trouble.

HERE AND THERE

People are beginning to holler for rain. There is lots of moisture in the ground but right on top 14-16 very dry and if we had a good rain all growing things would certainly benefit.

Town folks are wondering when the irrigation water will be on. It is hoped to have the garden sprinklers going in a few days.

The dust on the main highway going through town is a sight to see. When a car passes by it is almost impossible to see ten feet. And the residents of houses located on the road have a grand time trying to keep their houses clean. If we had the irrigation water on much of the dust nuisance could be overcome.

It is true that married couples quarrel more often over money matters than about any other topic. A budget will help keep the waters calm. Husband and wife are equal and as the children become of age to understand money and money management they should be taken into the business. Be definite as to who is responsible for paying what, and be clear that individual responsibilities are part of a co-operative partnership.

It is probably true that many persons put off starting a budget because their financial affairs are in bad shape and they can't see their way through the immediate barbed wire entanglements to the attractive country beyond. Even if what you have appears to be a great load of back debt, there are ways of putting your financial house in order—and this is worth doing so as to achieve the peace of mind and capacity for full enjoyment that come with a rational working plan.

Credit should be used wisely. Do not borrow more than is actually needed and budget to repay it in the shortest time, thus saving interest charges. Spending can be as virtuous as saving. No matter how large or how small your income may be, you can make your life miserable by spending in stupidity or saving in ignorance. You will be surprised to find how much comfort and luxury can be bought for very little if you shop and spend wisely, choose carefully, and plan your home so that everything is in proportion to your income. Start by keeping a purchase book in which to list articles you wish to buy, such as furniture, linens, drapes, dishes and so forth. Lay out a priority list, as to obtain the things first which will give the greatest satisfaction. Check them off as you obtain them, noting the store and the price. This is a practice that will help you in future when replacements are needed and, incidentally prove useful as an inventory in case of fire.

It is quite impossible to lay down a budget routine that will apply in practice in every individual case. There is no right or wrong budget, but only one that is right or wrong for your particular needs.

It doesn't matter greatly at what time of year you start a budget, but most people like to have an important affair like this run from a special date. January first is a nice time to start. There are individuals who may find as business firms do, that the calendar year is not suitable. The main thing is to have an annual budget. If it takes $120 to heat your home, it's better to apportion this at $10 a month even though you actually use it only six months a year instead the $20 a month for six cold months. In this same scheme it is a good thing to keep big expenses well spread out. If your insurance premium, your taxes and other bills fall due in the week you are supposed to start your vacation, you can see what will happen.

Finally consider the budget as a species of worry. What is your special financial worry? Is it really a problem, or are you just worrying on general principles? A budget will tell you. But if you're one of those people who refuse to go to a doctor as he may find something wrong with you and tell you, or he may find there is nothing wrong with you, thus depriving you of a conversation topic—then a budget is not what you need.

Judge in dentist chair: "Do you swear to pull the tooth, the whole tooth and nothing but the tooth?" "Daddy, if you will give me a dime, I'll tell you what the milk man said to Mama." "O.K., here's your dime." "He said, 'Do you want any milk today, lady?'"

"I noticed you got up and gave that lady your seat in the street car." "Since childhood," his pal responded. "I have respected a woman with a strap in her hand."

A Scot who had worn the same hat for 15 years decided with a heavy heart to buy a new one. Going into the only shop in the neighborhood he said: "Well, here I am again."
